

Hello everyone!

This is probably my last Induction Task for the Anglo-Saxon/Norman course (I believe you will be given Induction Tasks on the Crusades instead) so I thought it would be good to look at the sources we will be using.

Please find attached the following:

- 1) A chapter on sources by historian Brian Goulding -this gives you an idea of the sources we will use for the course.
- 2) A Source Booklet. I apologise in advance for any typo! I review it every year and every year I find a typo 😊 In September, I will give you a paper copy of this document but, in the meantime, you can use this digital copy to familiarise yourself with the sources.
- 3) A game (PPT). Once you have had a good look at the first two documents, you can have a go at this. I normally play this in class with my Y13 when we revise the sources. You are given 5 clues and you must guess the name of a source or of a medieval author. There are 10 sources/authors to guess. Don't worry about counting points! Just emailed me your guesses and I will tell you which ones you guessed right. Once again, the idea is to help you get more familiar with the sources.

Finally (and this is optional), I would recommend that at some point you get yourself a copy of Marc Morris' "The Norman Conquest". I always ask my Y12 to read it so if you want to get ahead, you could have a go at reading it and maybe produce a brief summary of each chapter. If you find it too dense however, don't worry and leave it aside for the moment.

I have really enjoyed communicating with you over the last two months and am now looking forward to putting faces to names in September! Don't hesitate to contact me if you have any question before then.

Stay safe and see you soon!

Kind regards,

Miss Karine
